Description:

Creating a collaborative school culture is an on-going process. Providing teachers with time and support to share data, instructional strategies, and student engagement techniques is challenging, but necessary as we work to improve our schools. When successfully implemented and sustained, the Professional Learning Communities (PLC's) model results in school improvement. Come join others in the region as we dive into an experience that recognizes the value of PLC's, walks through the process of implementation, and offers strategies to sustain the PLC. This multi-day workshop includes collaboration time to assess and revise current school practices in order to align with the PLC model.

Facilitator(s):

Michelle Rickicki, Justin Shumaker

Objectives:

The participants will:

- Identify Professional Learning Communities (PLC)
- Compare and contrast current practices with PLC practices
- Apply PLC concepts to improve school collaboration

Audience:

School Administrators: Grades K-12
