

MIRIAM BELOGLOVSKY

Miriam Beloglovsky is a professor of early childhood education, sought-after public speaker, coach, and the co-author of the Loose Parts Inspiring Play award-winning books series, which have created an international phenomenon and have been translated into different languages.

PLAYFUL TRANSFORMATION

Miriam is a play advocate and founder and CEO of Playful Transformation, a company dedicated to advocating for the right to play and finding joy in life. Miriam's mission is to weave together play, collaboration, public policy, education, critical reflection, inquiry, creativity, and innovation to enhance play opportunities for young children and educators. All with the belief that play is central to human transformation, building community and improving education can lead to authentic equity and a more civil society. She believes that we can create play spaces and play opportunities to impact people's lives in collaboration.

Before embarking on her journey as an early childhood educator and play advocate, Miriam was a newscaster, weather reporter, and media executive in California.

Miriam is fluent in English and Spanish language.

As a public speaker, Miriam engages, inspires, and motivates audiences throughout the world to explore the power of play. She embraces play as a vehicle that transforms people's lives.
