The ed part was a little long for people with ipads who couldn't get them to work

I expected: eggs

I received:

eggs

After this workshop I plan to:

I still need:

more eggs

... Also I need NYS to actually make firm decisions on what The NYSSES assessment will look like.

These eggs are cold, hard, and inedible. Comments:

lots of helpful info about Next Gen Science Standard

I expected: to hear info regarding roll out of NYSSLs

Rollout timeline of NYSSLs I received:
and also resources for how to plan
a lesson

After this workshop I plan to:
look at available resources and try to incorporate into lessons from now until June

I still need:

Comments:

- Time to implement major changes
- info on what assessment will look like
- I would like to see videos of what a good NYSSL lesson looks like.

I expected:

Science teachers to plan
MSSLS units together

I received:

Resources
&
Info.

After this workshop I plan to:

- Check out the resources.
- Read the K-12 Science Framework

I still need:

Comments:

You have resources but unless you show me a sample lesson, I'm not going to see its usefulness right away.
And I don't necessarily know what I want until I already wanted it.
Does that make sense?

Please comment:

Clay did a nice job giving resources regarding the transition to the next Science Standards. I wasn't crazy about the amount of time dedicated to training on the "eqg"... seems like it would be better as a separate training for those who were interested.

Nt sure the air quality egg sales applied to what I teach.
Good resources for next gen science but feel its still too early for training b/c many questions can't be answered. Thought the workshop ran smooth and moved through the schedule well.
